About Ermengarde of Hesbaye

Ermengarde of Hesbaye, or Irmengarde (c. 778 – October 3, 818) was Queen of the Franks and Holy Roman Empress as the wife of Emperor Louis I.

She was Frankish, the daughter of Ingram, count of Hesbaye, and Hedwig of Bavaria. Her family is known as the Robertians.

In 794/5 Ermengarde married Louis the Pious, king of Aquitania, king of Franks, king of Italy, ruler of the Holy Roman Empire.

She had six children:

- * Lothair I, born 795 in Altdorf, Bavaria
- * Pepin I of Aquitaine, born 797
- * Adelaide, born ca. 799
- o Possible wife of Robert the Strong, possible mother of Odo, Count of Paris and Robert I of France.
- * Rotrude, born 800
- * Hildegard / Matilda, born ca. 802
- o Wife of Gerard, Count of Auvergne, possible mother of Ranulf I of Poitiers.
- * Louis the German, born ca. 805

She died at Angers, France on October 3, 818. A few years after her death, her husband remarried to Judith of Bavaria, who bore him Charles the Bald.

Ermengarde of Hesbaye says -

Ermengarde (or Irmingard) of Hesbaye (c. 778 - 3 October 818), probably a member of the Robertian dynasty, was Holy Roman Empress from 813 and Queen of the Franks from 814 until her death as the wife of the Carolingian emperor Louis the Pious.

Life Ermengarde was the daughter of Count Ingerman of Hesbaye and Rotrude.

 - i) ENGUERRAND ([740/50]-). Thegan names "nobilissimi ducis Ingorammi...filius fratris Hruotgangi, sancti pontificis"[188]. According to Settipani[189], he was related to the family of Robert [Capet]. This is presumably based on the connection through the county of Hesbaie, in relation to which Robert (son of Lambert, died before 764, and supposed ancestor of the Robertiner family, see the document MEROVINGIAN NOBILITY) is recorded in 742. However, no primary source has yet been identified which directly links Enguerrand to the county of Hesbaie (apart from the reference to the origin of his paternal uncle, see above). Comte de Paris, although the primary source which proves that he held this county has not so far been identified. The birth date of Robert son of Lambert can be estimated to [700/10]. He would therefore presumably have belonged to the generation of Enguerrand's father or grandfather. Any relationship between Enguerrand and Robert on the paternal side could not have been closer than second cousin, which seems remote for the county of Hesbaie to have been transmitted between the two. It is possible that the relationship was through Enguerrand's mother, who could have been a sister of Robert, but this is a mere guess not based on any documentary evidence. M ROTRUD, daughter of ---. The primary source which names the wife of Enguerrand has not so far been identified. The Gesta Francorum records the death "818 V Non Oct" of "Irmingardis regina"[191]. The Vita Hludowici Imperatoris records the death "V Non Oct" of "Hirringardis regina" three days after falling ill[192]. m ([794]) as his first wife, LOUIS King of the Aquitainians, son of CHARLES I "Charlemagne" King of the Franks & his second wife Hildegard (Chasseneuil-du-Poitou {Vienne} [16 Apr/Sep] 778-island in the Rhine near Ingelheim 20 Jun 840, bur Metz, église abbatiale de Saint-Arnoul).
